Welcome

With a rich abundance of natural resources teamed with the very best facilities in our activity centres, Fermanagh is the perfect location for an activity holiday. Whether you’re an activity enthusiast with an urge to find that new adrenalin rush, a company looking for a team-building break or someone who prefers to take a more relaxed pace in the company of one of our highly trained instructors then we have something to suit everyone! Lough Erne is unquestionably the jewel in Fermanagh’s crown.

Its three hundred square miles of fresh water, dotted with over 150 wooded islands, make it one of Europe’s best kept secrets. This vast expanse of water is one of the most uncongested lakes in Europe, making it the ideal location for all water sports. From fishing to water skiing, cruising to canoeing this magnificent Lough as it all!

The rugged landscape of Fermanagh lends itself effortlessly to a huge selection of land based activities including golf, walking, cycling, horse-riding and even caving, where you can explore Fermanagh’s subterranean world at the Marble Arch Caves, part of the Marble Arch Caves Global Geopark. Recognised by UNESCO for its exceptional geological heritage the Geopark takes in a number of sites in Fermanagh and Cavan, making it the first cross-border Geopark in the world.

For the more courageous go airborne and discover the Lakelands from the sky. Or perhaps you’re after a more relaxing activity? If so we have that too! Fermanagh holds the perfect combination to an unforgettable holiday experience. There’s something for everyone. The difficulty is finding time to do it all!
The Fermanagh Lakelands is a haven for anglers. Our Loughs and Rivers offers game anglers the opportunity to fish for stocked and wild salmon and brown trout. The Coarse angler will find some of the finest fishing in Europe with an abundance of bream, roach, hybrids, perch and tench as well as pike fishing that is second to none. Whether seeking to catch them on fly or in a more traditional manner the region offers anglers a great challenge. There is no close season for the coarse fisherman and it is possible for the game angler to fish all year round in our designated rainbow fisheries.

Caving in Northern Ireland is isolated to the unique limestone geology of County Fermanagh, which is rich in caves and potholes. Access to the caves in the area is strictly controlled for safety and conservation reasons. Cave exploration should only be carried out by trained cavers using the correct equipment and with a thorough knowledge of the area and its systems. Most Fermanagh caves are wet with active underground streamways that may rise quickly during heavy rain.

The two cave systems in the area are the Tullybrack – Belmore Uplands and the Cuilcagh mountain area. The caves in the former area are mostly vertical pothole entrance shafts that often enter extensive horizontal systems. They include the Knockmore/ Pollarafrtra area, Noon’s hole, the Reyfad/Carrickbeg system and the Boho/ Aghanaglack River Area.

Cuilcagh Mountain is honeycombed by extensive cave systems, many of which contain large, mature passages with few vertical sections. The southern slopes of Cuilcagh are home to the Pollnagossan caves, the Shannon system and Ture Rising System while to the north on Marlbank, the Marble Arch Caves, Prod’s Pot, Cascades and Tullyhona Rising Cave are actively explored.

Caving in Fermanagh is widely regarded as an enjoyable but challenging activity that allows cavers to appreciate the wonderful underground beauty of the region. Caving is carried out by groups of local experienced cavers or through activity centres that are ideal for the beginner or those not familiar with the area.

For those who would prefer a safe and controlled visit to a cave environment a trip to The Marble Arch Caves is the perfect way to satisfy your curiosity!

Explore a fascinating, natural underworld of rivers, waterfalls, winding passages and lofty chambers as an informative guide takes you on a guided tour of the underworld.
