Purple Flag
Better Town Centres at Night

- Enniskillen is one of only four towns in Northern Ireland to be awarded the prestigious Purple Flag award.
- Purple Flag is the national accreditation scheme for town centres at night. It is the “gold standard” for night time destinations. Like Blue Flag for beaches, places that meet the standards can fly the flag. Purple Flag centres are clean, safe and convivial, with something for everyone.
- The award of flags is based on an independent assessment undertaken by trained assessors using a rigorous and comprehensive set of standards for the night time economy.
- Purple Flag is run by the Association of Town Centre Management (ATCM) in partnership with industry, licensees, retailers, central and local government, the police and consumers.
- The Enniskillen Purple Flag partnership is led by Fermanagh District Council and includes representatives from Police, Licensed Trade, Fermanagh Lakeland Tourism and Department for Social Development.

Lough Erne with its large stretches of water covering over 300 square miles, studded with over 156 islands, has long been known for its natural beauty. It is a birdwatchers’ paradise. The fishing in Fermanagh attracts anglers from all over the world. Historic sites, castle ruins and stately homes on islands and on shore tell the colourful story of Co Fermanagh through the centuries.

The Erne is now linked to the Shannon system via the Shannon–Erne Waterway making it the longest navigable inland waterway in Europe and offers a variety of cruising experiences. After enjoying all the activities the area has to offer, why not relax over a pint of Guinness in one of the traditional pubs, or shut down the galley for the evening and enjoy a meal in one of the many restaurants catering for all tastes.

No driving licence is needed. Upon arrival at the marina of your choice, you will be given thorough instructions into the handling of your cruiser before you set off.

Ample crockery, cutlery, cooking utensils and tea towels all included. All craft are fitted with electric lights, piped drinking water, hot and cold water supply, refrigerator, heating and marine flush WC. Sleeping bag/duvet with sheets, pillows, blanket and hand towel are provided for each crew member. During the Great Famine of 1845–50 in Ireland, Fermanagh lost between the Census of 1841 and 1851 around 40,000 people or about ¼ of its population through death, migration or emigration.

There had been emigration before this time but the famine unleashed a flood of migrants and their descendants today, populate, England, Scotland, Wales, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand to name some of the principal destinations. Fermanagh’s population continued to drop and at c 55,000 is now one third of what it was. Today, many enthused through the Internet and Family History Societies now like to come to Fermanagh in search of their Roots. There are many examples of illustrious Fermanagh descendants around the world such as Neil Armstrong, the first man on the Moon and John White, Surgeon General of the First Fleet to Australia but famous or otherwise much can be found out about your Fermanagh ancestors.

Fermanagh County Library Irish & Local Studies Department, Enniskillen Library

Here you can browse local history publications which often contain graveyard inscriptions, school roll books going back to c 1870, some church records and details of what life in Fermanagh was like before your ancestors left. Ordnance Survey maps can also be seen here as well as microfilm of local newspapers going back to the early 1800s which can be an important source especially if you have knowledge of significant dates. As signed up members of Fermanagh Library (Free) you can search ancestry.com one of the largest on line database in the World as well as local databases. The staff are helpful and knowledgeable having dealt with thousands of queries through the years. If they don’t know the answer they probably know of someone who can provide the answer. Enniskillen Townhall...

...houses the District Registrar’s office for births, deaths, marriages and civil partnerships for Fermanagh. Searches can be carried out for births, deaths and marriages from the mid 1800’s.

Taking on a genealogical search anywhere demands prior research. The degree of help you can be given is often directly in proportion to the information you have personally gleaned and the best results are obtained by finding out in advance the Parish or townland of origin of your ancestors. Your particular family information does not come pre-packed ready to be handed across the counter but with a little careful preparation your ancestral past may be revealed.

Fermanagh Based Family History Researcher. Frank Roofe is a Genealogist based in Enniskillen, Co Fermanagh who undertakes all types of family research. He can be contacted at frankroofe@btinternet.com or by telephone: 0044 (0) 28 6632 5426. Janus Figure

Boa Island, Kesh, Enniskillen

In Caldragh Cemetery on Boa Island, Lower lough Erne stand two unique stone carvings. The larger of these is a Janus figure, two figures back to back with pear shaped heads and interlacing between the heads representing hair. The East face pictured left is carved with a penis and is the male side of the figure, and the west face pictured above is the female side. Both of these carvings are in high relief. The smaller figure which is known as “the Lustyman” because it was found on the nearby island Lusty More, may in fact be a female figure. Both figures are described as Celtic Idols. The Carvings appear to have weathered quite a lot in recent years.

Visit Fermanagh for World Renowned Angling

The Fermanagh Lakelands is a haven for anglers. With its abundance of Loughs and Rivers, our waters offer game anglers the opportunity to fish for salmon as well as stocked rainbow and brown trout. The famous sonaghan, ferox and gillaroo can also be found in these diverse waters.

The Coarse angler will find some of the finest fishing available in Europe, with bream, roach and hybrids in abundance as well as perch and tench. Add to this pike fishing that is second to none - whether seeking to catch them on fly or in a more traditional manner and the region offers all anglers wonderful opportunities.

There is no closed season for the coarse angler as Lough Erne and many still waters are open all year round. There are many popular Loughs, rivers and fisheries that are easily accessed by visitors. Lough Erne & Lough Melvin being the more well known.
A number of angling events take place in Fermanagh throughout the year. The main one being the Waterways Ireland Classic Fishing Festival, which is one of Europe’s premier fishing festivals with up to 300 anglers from Ireland and Europe taking part. Taking place this year from 9th-13th May. Also taking place this year is the Waterways Ireland Erne World Pike Fishing Festival in Mid October.

Lough Erne

Lough Erne is made up of the Upper Lough East of Enniskillen and the Lower Lough which runs west to Belleek. The Lough is a mixed coarse and game fishery. The game angling, in the main, takes place on the Lower Lough although trout are found throughout the system. The Lower Lough is a large expanse of water, over 15 miles long with numerous islands and bays. These provide vast areas of shallow water and rocky shores making for ideal fishing grounds. Although a limited number of salmon run the Lough wild brown trout are the quarry and the Lough holds an excellent head of fish.

Lough Melvin

Sitting on the western end of Co. Fermanagh this is one of Ireland’s most famous Loughs. It is home to three distinct species of trout - the magic sonaghan, the gillaroo and the ferox - as well as enjoying a run of spring salmon and grilse. Fishing starts in February with the arrival of the first salmon and continues through the months with grilse from May to July and wonderful trout fishing throughout the season. Trolling is the most used method for the springers but fly fishing for the sonaghan and gillaroo, as well as the grilse, is excellent.

Organic Growing celebrates 20 years in Fermanagh

Fermanagh has a long and proud history of farming. Organic farming is an important part of our county’s food story. Orchard Acre Farm, near Irvinestown has for over 20 years been producing a wide range of produce in harmony with nature and without dependence on chemicals.

Clever use of hardy plant varieties, glass houses and poly tunnels mean that Orchard Acre Farm manages to grow food all year round. Like the other organic growers in the county the farm shares its experience through regular public events and a year round programme of events, courses and market stalls at festivals. What’s in a Name?
by Charlotte Wilson

Have you ever wondered about the meaning of the name of the town, village or townland where you live?

The vast majority of placenames in Ireland are anglicisations or phonetic spellings of Irish language names. Places, especially townlands, were often named after noteworthy features of the landscape, such as hills, rocks, valleys, trees, lakes, islands etc. Examples of this include ‘carraig’ (meaning rock), ‘knock’ (meaning hill), ‘letter’ (meaning hillside), ‘lis’ (meaning earth ring fort), ‘derry’ (meaning oak grove). Other places were named after man-made features, such as churches, castles, and bridges. Examples of this include ‘kil’ (meaning church) and ‘droichead’ (meaning bridge). ‘Bally’ (meaning settlement) is usually compounded with personal or family names, for example ‘Ballycassidy’ (meaning town of the Cassidys).

Successive waves of Norse, Anglo-Norman, Scots and English settlers have added to a rich variety of place names, often bringing some names with them from their former homelands and creating many more. The spelling of townland names often varies due largely to the difficulties of representing the pronunciation of Irish language names in English spelling.
